Business & Commercial Law

Matthew's practice in commercial and business law is primarily based in insolvency and contractual disputes.

Matthew is regularly instructed in bankruptcy and insolvency matters, acting for both creditors and debtors, advising and appearing in the High Court and county courts and has experience of setting aside statutory demands and restraining advertisement of winding-up petitions.

Before coming to the Bar, Matthew obtained a distinction in his commercial-based masters degree (LL.M.) at the University of Durham where he studied, amongst other things, company law, corporate governance, obligations and international intellectual property law.
