Business & Commercial Law

Having read Politics at Newcastle, Oliver undertook a conversion course in Law in which he obtained a distinction. Prior to coming to the Bar, Oliver worked in a niche entertainment and media law firm carrying out a broad range of civil and commercial litigation.

Oliver is currently practising in commercial and common law work including contract, sale of goods.

Oliver has handled professional negligence cases relating to solicitors, builders, and architects, on behalf of both claimants and defendants, and is well versed in the particular issues relating to the quantification of damages and evaluation of "lost chances" which arise in such cases.

Recommendations for Oliver

?an efficient and effective barrister, providing creative and commercial solutions to clients. Oliver is always approachable and is sensitive when dealing with clients; whilst able to deliver clear and practical advice even in difficult and complex situations?

?I was thoroughly delighted with his professionalism, his attention to detail and his frank and honest views...A fantastic barrister.?

?a tenacious advocate and able to get to the root of the problem quickly.?

?Oliver provides clear, practical advice on commercial and employment matters. I would certainly recommend him."
